

MISSION

The Grants Managers Network (GMN) improves grantmaking by advancing the knowledge, skills, and abilities of grants management professionals and by leading grantmakers to adopt and incorporate effective practices that benefit the philanthropic community.

VISION

The Grants Managers Network's vision is to represent all philanthropic professionals engaged in grants management. We provide the knowledge, training, and tools that members need to succeed in their jobs and advance, if desired, to leadership positions.

The leaders of grantmaking organizations acknowledge the need for grants management expertise. These leaders recognize GMN's ability to provide and develop that expertise and encourage their staff to participate in and support GMN.

The grantmaking standards set by GMN become common practice in the field. GMN's use of technology in building a professional community, delivery of products and services to members, and promotion of environmentally sustainable grantmaking practices is a model for membership organizations.

As a result of its broad membership base, acknowledged expertise, and track record of results-focused leadership, GMN is sought after as a grantmaking expert and advisor in initiatives to improve philanthropy.

CORE VALUES

To accomplish our mission, the Grants Managers Network bases its decisions and actions on the following core values:

Integrity—To be honest and forthright and maintain the highest ethical standards

Excellence—To be the very best in all we do, striving for continuous improvement and responding rapidly to change

Community—To maintain GMN as a member-focused and member-driven organization, recognizing and reflecting in everything we do the needs and diversity of our members

Growth—To focus our efforts on programs, products, and services that advance the knowledge, skills, and leadership abilities of our members

Collaboration—To seek opportunities to work with others who support our mission and goals and enhance our work through partnerships

Leadership—To educate individual organizations, the broader philanthropic community, and others on the value that the grants management profession brings to philanthropy

MESSAGE FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Expertise in Giving...

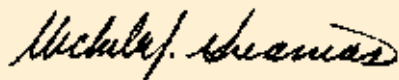

GMN's new tagline encapsulates our 2009 activities and accomplishments perfectly.

We shared our grantmaking expertise to the broader philanthropic field through our leadership of Project Streamline and formed new partnerships to solve old problems. We helped members develop new expertise through educational programs and resources. And we advanced the profession by creating the Body of Knowledge for grants management—the first ever attempt at defining what a grants manager needs to know to do the job.

Our members continued to selflessly give of their advice, ideas, and resources both in person and through our enhanced online member community to help colleagues solve problems, improve their organizations' grantmaking practices, and make grantmaking more efficient and effective. GMN expanded the available vehicles for this knowledge sharing by launching the What Works Webinar series. And our new regional chapter in Florida expands the number of opportunities members have to meet face-to-face.

GMN's annual conference in Denver brought together 300 grants management professionals for more than 30 educational sessions ranging from legal and tax compliance basics to online grants management systems to exploring professional development opportunities for seasoned grants managers.

Thank you to all of GMN's members, volunteers, and contributors. Your passion and dedication for the profession makes this organization possible and has positioned us to continue to expand our members' expertise in giving.

Michelle L. Greanias
Executive Director

SHARING EXPERTISE WITH THE FIELD

As the only professional association focused on grantmaking operations, GMN is uniquely positioned to lead and partner in efforts to make grantmaking more efficient and effective. We are able to leverage the combined knowledge of our 1,400 members to develop new solutions and document best practices. Our members then implement those solutions and practices within the nearly 1,000 grantmaking organizations that employ them, creating significant momentum for field-wide change.

In 2009, GMN's largest commitment to field-wide change remained Project Streamline, a collaborative effort of organizations from both sides of the grantmaker/grantseeker divide who are studying grant application and reporting practices, their impact on grantseekers and grantmakers, and how practices can be streamlined to benefit everyone. We also engaged in conversations with other funder networks on information sharing and collaboration to better serve grantmakers. Finally, we continued work to define the profession through i) the development of a Body of Knowledge that documents the knowledge and skills needed to be a grants manager and ii) the expansion of the GM Guide, which gathers, vets, and organizes the collective knowledge of GMN members into an online grants management "textbook."

Our 2009 accomplishments have positioned us to achieve even more in 2010, including the release of Project Streamline resources and tools, the launch of a project to green grantmaking practices, and a project to develop geographic coding standards.

“For structured content sharing, one of the coolest things I’ve seen in the philanthropy space that I just discovered is the [GM] Guide.”

SHARING EXPERTISE WITH AND AMONG MEMBERS

GMN strives to provide the knowledge, training, and tools that members need to succeed in their jobs and advance to leadership positions. In our 2009 member survey, members report that GMN:

- Helps them perform better in their current job (84 percent)
- Connects them to a professional community (95 percent), and
- Promotes the profession and helps the leadership at their organization better appreciate the role and contribution of grants managers (76 percent).

In 2009, GMN delivered more than 100 hours of education through our 13 regional networks, annual conference, and new “What Works” peer-to-peer webinar series. To supplement face-to-face interaction, we launched a new online community connecting all members to provide mutual advice and support to solve immediate problems. GMN also conducted research and published the GMN Examiner newsletter to ensure members are informed and ready to address emerging issues.

We will build on this momentum in 2010 by:

- Making the GMN online member community more intuitive and the notifications of new community content more useful.
- Delivering an annual conference that provides members with timely and concrete information, gives them the knowledge to do their jobs, and helps them improve the grantmaking practices at their organizations;
- Increasing support of GMN’s regional chapters and their leadership to assist them in delivering quality programs to members, and
- Focusing GMN’s membership efforts on increasing member engagement by developing strategies to help members access GMN’s resources and services, make GMN volunteerism part of their professional development plans, and connect to each other more easily and more frequently.

“I really feel grateful to GMN, its leadership, and members for all the support [they’ve] provided to me. I hope we can continue to strengthen our profession together, communicate better with each other, and keep getting better at what we do!”

To support its work, GMN is committed to being an accountable and transparent organization overseen by a strong, representative governing body with the financial and human resources necessary to do its work.

THE ORGANIZATION

To support its work, GMN is committed to being an accountable and transparent organization overseen by a strong, representative governing body with the financial and human resources necessary to do its work.

Key accomplishments in 2009 included:

- Receiving confirmation of the soundness of GMN's accounting practices through an unqualified audit opinion for 2008.
- Releasing GMN's first annual report.
- Strengthening GMN's 149-member volunteer program including written volunteer job descriptions and training for volunteer managers.
- Implementing a new membership and fundraising database to position GMN to develop more sophisticated fundraising, outreach, and engagement strategies in the future.

GMN fell short of our 2009 fundraising targets by $113,000, reducing the organization's operating reserves. To address this challenge and further strengthen GMN's governance and operations, GMN will undertake the following activities in 2010:

- Execute a fundraising strategy that meets GMN's financial targets and includes a new contribution category—Contributing Organization Membership—which provides additional benefits for organizations that give at specific, asset-based contribution levels.
- Create smaller, more focused volunteer teams and implement a recognition strategy to better thank our volunteers for making GMN possible.
- Form an Accountability and Transparency Team to ensure GMN's policies and procedures adhere to the highest operational standards.
- Add paid support for key functions like communications and fundraising.
- Implement a new transition schedule and board orientation program that better prepares incoming board members and creates a seamless leadership transition for GMN's national volunteer teams.
